8. REPRESENTATIVE METHODS OF INSTRUCTION:

Text analysis is primary to this course, as it provides students with ample opportunity to critically examine the behaviors and nature of the English language. Contrastive analysis with students' own first language is useful and beneficial. Instruction methods may include:

- presentations of structures in text, film or audio for deductive or inductive analysis
- use of charts and references to illustrate and clarify language structure
- writing activities such as paragraphs or letters to illustrate and demonstrate mastery of mastery of language structure
- speaking activities such as interviews, presentations, or surveys to illustrate and demonstrate mastery of language structure
- use of language logs to record writing errors and correction of them
- searches of internet texts to identify and explain grammar structures

9. ASSIGNMENTS:

Each grammar structure taught in the course should be demonstrated effectively by the student in speaking and in writing. Assignments can include:

- paragraphs or letters
- interviews, presentations, or surveys
- interactive web activities to practice grammar structures
- exercises in text or from supplemental material to practice structures
- language logs

10. EVALUATION OF STUDENT PERFORMANCE:

Students receive either a letter grade or credit/no credit based upon satisfactory completion at the level of 70% or better on all assignments and participatory activities. Speaking role-plays and presentations will be given to test grammatical speech and written exams will be given to assess language use and ability to recognize correct forms. Careful analysis of language through the use of language logs will demonstrate students' abilities to discern between language structures and apply good editing skills.
